

Proclamation

by

Steven L. Beshear
Governor

of the

Commonwealth of Kentucky

To All To Whom These Presents Shall Come:

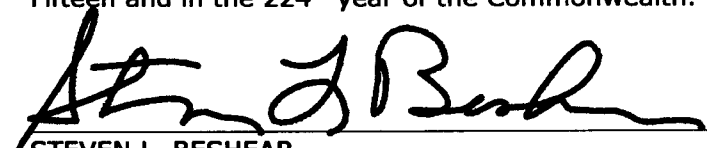

- WHEREAS, The Kentucky Office of State Archaeology within the University of Kentucky's Department of Anthropology and the Kentucky Heritage Council/State Historic Preservation Office maintain an extensive and growing record of thousands of archaeological sites from across the state, many of which are listed on the National Register of Historic Places or are designated National Historic Landmarks; and
- WHEREAS, This remarkable archaeological record documents more than twelve thousand years of Kentucky's past, from Native American hunter-gatherers and farmers, to colonial European farmers and African slaves, to their more recent descendants who farmed, mined, and ran industries and businesses; and
- WHEREAS, Despite this information, our understanding of Kentucky's indigenous history is still incomplete and many myths about it persist, so professional archaeologists continue to work with the public to provide new insights into our collective past and greatly expand our knowledge about different cultural traditions; and
- WHEREAS, Archaeology's contributions to our understanding of, and appreciation for, Kentucky's rich cultural heritage are often overlooked, and new findings can make visible those groups rendered invisible by history, change our perception of our past and enrich understanding of our own lives today; and
- WHEREAS, Through public outreach, archaeologists strive to prevent looting and protect these fragile records of the Commonwealth's heritage; and
- WHEREAS, Since 1989, Kentucky's oldest and largest public archaeology event, Living Archaeology Weekend, is presented the 3rd weekend each September in Daniel Boone National Forest to call attention to the important work of archaeologists and the important role archaeological sites play in teaching us about our collective past;

NOW, THEREFORE, I, STEVEN L. BESHEAR, Governor of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, do hereby proclaim September 2015 as

KENTUCKY ARCHAEOLOGY MONTH

and encourage its observance.

DONE AT THE CAPITOL, in the City of Frankfort the 21st day of August, in the year of Our Lord Two Thousand Fifteen and in the 224th year of the Commonwealth.
